MINSTREL;

O R,

THE PROGRESS OF GENIUS.

A POEM,

IN TWO BOOKS.

MINSTREL

THE FIRST BOOK.

I.

A H! who can tell how hard it is to climb

The steep where Fame's proud temple shines afar?

Ah! who can tell how many a soul sublime

Has felt the insuence of malignant star,

And waged with Fortune an eternal war!

Check'd by the scoff of Pride, by Envy's frown,

And Poverty's unconquerable bar,

In life's low vale remote has pined alone,

Then dropt into the grave, unpitied and unknown!

II.

And yet, the languor of inglorious days,
Not equally oppressive is to all.
Him, who ne'er listen'd to the voice of praise,
The silence of neglect can ne'er appal.
There are, who, deaf to mad Ambition's call,
Would shrink to hear th' obstreperous trump of Fame;
Supremely blest, if to their portion fall
Health, competence, and peace. Nor higher aim
Had He, whose simple tale these artless lines proclaim

III.

This fapient age disclaims all classic lore;
Else I should here in cunning phrase display,
How forth The MINSTREL fared in days of yore,
Right glad of heart, though homely in array;
His waving locks and beard all hoary grey:
And, from his bending shoulder, decent hung
His harp, the sole companion of his way,
Which to the whistling wind responsive rung:
And ever as he went some merry lay he sung.

IV.

Fret not yourselves, ye silken sons of pride,
That a poor Wanderer should inspire my strain.
The Muses fortune's fickle smile deride,
Nor ever bow the knee in Mammon's fane;
For their delights are with the village-train,
Whom Nature's laws engage, and Nature's charms:
They hate the sensual, and scorn the vain;
The parasite their insuence never warms,
Nor him whose fordid soul the love of wealth alarms.

V.

Though richest hues the peacock's plumes adorn,
Yet horror screams from his discordant throat.
Rise, sons of harmony, and hail the morn,
While warbling larks on russet pinions stoat;
Or seek at noon the woodland scene remote,
Where the grey linnets carol from the hill.
O let them ne'er with artificial note,
'To please a tyrant, strain the little bill, [will.
But sing what heaven inspires, and wander where they

VI.

Liberal, not lavish, is kind Nature's hand;
Nor was perfection made for man below.
Yet all her schemes with nicest art are plann'd,
Good counteracting ill, and gladness wo.
With gold and gems if Chilian mountains glow,
If bleak and barren Scotia's hills arise;
There plague and poison, lust and rapine grow;
Here peaceful are the vales, and pure the skies,
And freedom fires the soul, and sparkles in the eyes.

VII.

Then grieve not, thou to whom th' indulgent Muse Vouchsafes a portion of celestial fire;
Nor blame the partial Fates, if they refuse
Th' imperial banquet, and the rich attire.
Know thine own worth, and reverence the lyre.
Wilt thou debase the heart which God refin'd?
No; let thy heaven-taught soul to heaven aspire,
To fancy, freedom, harmony, resign'd;
Ambition's groveling crew for ever lest behind.

VIII.

Canst thou forego the pure ethereal soul.
In each fine sense so exquisitely keen,
On the dull couch of Luxury to loll,
Stung with disease, and stupisted with spleen;
Fain to implore the aid of Flattery's screen,
Even from thyself thy loathsome heart to hide,
(The mansion then no more of joy serene),
Where sear, distrust, malevolence, abide,
And impotent desire, and disappointed pride?

IX.

O how canst thou renounce the boundless store Of charms which Nature to her vot'ry yields! The warbling woodland, the refounding shore, The pomp of groves, and garniture of fields; All that the genial ray of morning gilds. And all that echoes to the fong of even, All that the mountain's sheltering bosom shields. And all the dread magnificence of heaven,

O how canst thou renounce, and hope to be forgiven!

-X.

These charms shall work thy foul's eternal health, And love, and gentleness, and joy, impart. . But these thou must renounce, if Just of wealth E'er win its way to thy corrupted heart; For, ah! it poisons like a scorpion's dart; Prompting th' ungenerous with, the felfith scheme, The Hern resolve unmoved by pity's smart, The troublous day, and long diffressful dream .-Return, my roving Muse, resume thy purposed theme.

XI.

There lived in Gothic days, as legends tell, A shepherd-swain, a man of low degree; Whose sires, perchance, in Fairyland might dwell, Sicilian groves, or vales of Arcady; But he, I ween, was of the north countrie *:

^{*} There is hardly an ancient ballad, or romance, wherein a Minstrel or Harper appears, but he is charafterifed, by way of eminence, to have been " Or

A nation famed for fong, and beauty's charms; Zealous, yet modest; innocent, though free; Patient of toil; serene amidst alarms; Instexible in faith; invincible in arms.

XII.

The shepherd-swain of whom I mention made,
On Scotia's mountains sed his little flock;
The sickle, scythe, or plough, he never sway'd;
An honest heart was almost all his stock;
His drink the living water from the rock:
The milky dams supplied his board, and lent
Their kindly sleece to bassle winter's shock;
And he, though oft with dust and sweat besprent,
Did guide and guard their wanderings, wheresoe'er they went.

XIII.

From labour health, from health contentment springs.

Contentment opes the source of every joy.

He envied not, he never thought of kings;

Nor from those appetites sustain'd annoy,

Which chance may frustrate, or indulgence cloy:

Nor Fate his calm and humble hopes beguiled;

He mourn'd no recreant friend, nor mistress coy,

For on his vows the blameless Phæbe smiled,

And her alone he loved, and loved her from a child,

A 3

XIV.

No jealousy their dawn of love o'ercast,
Nor blasted were their wedded days with strife;
Each season look'd delightful, as it past,
To the fond husband, and the faithful wife.
Beyond the lowly vale of shepherd life
They never roam'd; secure beneath the storm
Which in Ambition's losty land is rife,
Where peace and love are canker'd by the worm
Of pride, each bud of joy industrious to deform.

XV.

The wight whose tale these artless lines unfold,
Was all the offspring of this simple pair.
His birth no oracle or seer foretold:
No prodigy appear'd in earth or air,
Nor aught that might a strange event declare.
You guess each circumstance of Edwin's birth;
The parent's transport, and the parent's care;
The gossip's prayer for wealth, and wit, and worth;
And one long summer-day of indolence and mirth.

XVI.

And yet poor Edwin was no vulgar boy;
Deep thought oft feem'd to fix his infant eye.
Dainties he heeded not, nor gaude, nor toy,
Save one short pipe of rudest minstrelsy.
Silent when glad; affectionate, though shy;
And now his look was most demurely fad,
And now he laugh'd aloud, yet none knew why.
The neighbours star'd and sigh'd, yet bless'd the lad:
Some deem'd him wondrous wise, and some believ'd him mad.

XVII.

But why should I his childish feats display?

Concourse, and noise, and toil, he ever sted;

Nor cared to mingle in the clamorous fray

Of squabbling imps; but to the forest sped,

Or roam'd at large the lonely mountain's head;

Or, where the maze of some bewilder'd stream

To deep untrodden groves his sootsteps led,

There would he wander wild, 'till Phæbus' beam,

Shot from the western cliss, released the weary team.

XVIII.

Th' exploit of strength, dexterity, or speed,
To him nor vanity nor joy could bring.
His heart, from cruel sport estranged, would bleed
To work the wo of any living thing,
By trap, or net; by arrow, or by sling;
These he detested, those he scorn'd to wield:
He wish'd to be the guardian, not the king,
Tyrant far less, or traitor of the field.
And sure the sylvan reign unbloody joy might yield.

XIX.

Lo! where the stripling, wrapt in wonder, roves
Beneath the precipice o'erhung with pine;

And sees, on high, amidst th' encircling groves,
From cliss to cliss the foaming torrents shine:
While waters, woods, and winds, in concert join.
And Echo swells the chorus to the skies.
Would Edwin this majestic scene resign
For aught the huntsman's pany craft supplies?

Ah! no; he better knows great Nature's charms to prize.

XX.

And oft he traced the uplands, to survey,
When o'er the sky advanced the kindling dawn,
The crimson cloud, blue main, and mountain grey,
And lake, dim-gleaming on the smoky lawn;
Far to the west the long, long vale withdrawn,
Where twilight loves to linger for a while;
And now he faintly kens the bounding sawn,
And villager abroad at early toil.—
But, lo! the sun appears! and heaven, earth, ocean, smile.

XXL

And oft the craggy cliff he loved to climb,
When all in mift the world below was loft.
What dreadful pleasure! there to stand sublime,
Like shipwreck'd mariner on desert coast,
And view th' enormous waste of vapour, tost
In billows, lengthening to th' horizon round,
Now scoop'd in gulfs, with mountains now emboss'd!
And hear the voice of mirth and song rebound,
Flocks, herds, and waterfalls, along the hoar profound!

XXII.

In truth he was a strange and wayward wight,
Fond of each gentle, and each dreadful scene.
In darkness, and in storm, he found delight:
Nor less, than when on ocean-wave serene
The southern sun disfused his dazzling shene.
Even sad vicissitude amused his soul:
And if a sigh would sometimes intervene,
And down his cheek a tear of pity roll,
Asigh, a tear, so sweet, he wish'd not to control.

XXIII.

- O ye wild groves, O where is now your bloom!'
 (The Muse interprets thus his tender thought.)
- 'Your flowers, your verdure, and your balmy gloom,
- " Of late fo grateful in the hour of drought!

11.

- Why do the birds, that fong and rapture brought
- "To all your bowers, their mansions now forfake?
- ' Ah! why has fickle chance this ruin wrought?
- ' For now the form howls mournful through the brake,
- And the dead foliage flies in many a shapeless flake.

XXIV.

- Where now the rill, melodious, pure, and cool,
- And meads, with life, and mirth, and beauty, crown'd!
- ' Ah! fee, th' unlightly slime, and sluggish pool,
- ' Have all the folitary vale imbrown'd;
- Fled each fair form, and mute each melting found.
- 'The raven croaks forlorn on naked foray:
- 'And, hark! the river, bursting every mound,
- Down the vale thunders; and, with wasteful sway,
- Uproots the grove, and rolls the shatter'd rocks away.

XXV.

- "Yet fuch the destiny of all on earth:
- So flourishes and fades majestic man.
- Fair is the bud his vernal morn brings forth,
- " And fostering gales a while the nursling fan.
- 'O smile, ye heavens, serene; ye mildews wan,
- 'Ye blighting whirlwinds, spare his balmy prime,
- Nor lessen of his life the little span.
- Born on the fwift, though filent, wings of Time,
- Old-age comes on apace to ravage all the clime.

XXVI.

- And be it fo. Let those deplore their doom,
- Whose hope still grovels in this dark sojourn.
- But lofty fouls, who look beyond the tomb,
- ' Can smile at Fate, and wonder how they mourn.
- Shall fpring to these fad scenes no more return?
- ' Is vonder wave the fun's eternal bed ?-
- Soon shall the orient with new lustre burn,
- And fpring shall soon her vital influence shed.
- Again attune the grove, again adorn the mead.

XXVII.

- ' Shall I be left abandon'd in the duft.
- When Fate, relenting, lets the flower revive?
- Shall nature's voice, to man alone unjust,
- Bid him, though doom'd to perish, hope to live?
- Is it for this fair Virtue oft must strive
- With disappointment, penury, and pain ?-
- ' No: Heaven's immortal spring shall yet arrive;
- ' And man's majestic beauty bloom again,
- Bright through th' eternal year of Love's triumphant 'reign.'

XXVIII.

This truth sublime his simple sire had taught. In sooth, 'twas almost all the shepherd knew. No subtle nor superfluous lore he sought, Nor ever wish'd his Edwin to pursue.

- Let man's own fphere (quoth he) confine his view,
- Be man's peculiar work his fole delight.'

And much, and oft, he warn'd him, to eschew

Falschood and guile, and aye maintain the right,

By pleasure unseduced, unawed by lawless might.

XXIX.

- And, from the prayer of Want, and plaint of Wo,
- O never, never turn away thine ear.
- Forlorn, in this bleak wilderness below,
- 'Ah! what were man, should Heaven refuse to hear!
- 'To others do (the law is not fevere)
- What to thyfelf thou wishest to be done.
- Forgive thy foes; and love thy parents dear,
- ' And friends, and native land; nor those alone;
- 'All human weal and wo learn thou to make thine own,'

XXX.

See, in the rear of the warm funny shower,
The visionary boy from shelter sty!
For now the storm of summer-rain is o'er,
And cool, and fresh, and fragrant is the sky.
And, lo! in the dark east, expanded high,
The rainbow brightens to the setting sun!
Fond sool, that deem'st the streaming glory nigh,
How vain the chace thine ardor has begun!
"Tis sled asar, ere half thy purposed race be run.

XXXI.

Yet couldst thou learn, that thus it fares with age, When pleasure, wealth, or power, the bosom warm, This bassled hope might tame thy manhood's rage, And Disappointment of her sting disarm.—

But why should foresight thy fond heart alarm? Perish the lore that deadens young desire!

Pursue, poor imp, th' imaginary charm, Indulge gay Hope, and Fancy's pleasing fire:

XXXII.

When the long-founding curfew from afar
Loaded with loud lament the lonely gale,
Young Edwin, lighted by the evening star,
Lingering and listening, wander'd down the vale.
There would be dream of graves, and corses pale;
And ghosts, that to the charnel-dungeon throng,
And drag a length of clanking chain, and wail,
'Till silenced by the owl's terrific song,
Or blast that shrieks by sits the shuddering isses along.

XXXIH.

Or, when the fetting moon, in crimson dyed,
Hung o'er the dark and melancholy deep,
To haunted stream, remote from man, he hied,
Where Fays of yore their revels wont to keep;
And there let Fancy roam at large, till sleep
A vision brought to his intranced sight.
And first, a wildly-murmuring wind 'gan creep
Shrill to his ringing ear; then tapers bright,
With instantaneous gleam, illumed the vault of Night.

XXXIV.

Anon in view a portal's blazon'd arch'
Arose; the trumpet bids the valves unfold;
And forth an host of little warriors march,
Grasping the diamond lance, and targe of gold.
Their look was gentle, their demeanour bold,
And green their helms, and green their silk attire;
And here and there, right venerably old,
The long-robed minstrels wake the warbling wire,
And some with mellow breath the martial pipe inspire.

XXXV.

With merriment, and fong, and timbrels clear, A troop of dames from myrtle bowers advance; The little warriors doff the targe and spear, And loud enlivening strains provoke the dance. They meet, they dart away, they wheel askance; To right, to left, they thrid the flying maze; Now bound aloft, with vigorous fpring, then glance Rapid along: with many-colour'd rays

Of tapers, gems, and gold, the echoing forests blaze.

XXXVI.

The dream is fled. Proud harbinger of day, Who fear'dft the vision with thy clarion farill, Fell chanticleer! who oft hast reft away My fancied good, and brought fabitantial ill! O to thy curfed fcream, discordant still, Let Harmony aye shut her gentle ear: Thy boaftful mirth let jealous rivals spill. Infult thy creft, and gloffy pinions tear, And ever in thy dreams the ruthless fox appear.

XXXVII.

Forbear, my Muse. Let Love attune thy line. Revoke the fpell. Thine Edwin frets not fo. For how should he at wicked chance repine, Who feels from every change amusement flow? Even now his eyes with smiles of rapture glow, As on he wanders through the scenes of morn, Where the fresh flowers in living lustre blow, Where thousand pearls the dewy lawns adorn, A thousand notes of joy in every breeze are born.

XXXVIII.

But who the melodies of morn can tell?

The wild brook babbling down the mountain fide;

The lowing herd; the sheepfold's simple bell;

The pipe of early shepherd dim descried

In the lone valley; echoing far and wide

The clamorous horn along the cliss above;

The hollow murmur of the ocean-tide;

The hum of bees, and linnet's lay of love,

XXXIX.

The cottage-curs at early pilgrim bark;
Crown'd with her pail the tripping milkmaid fings;
The whiftling plowman stalks afield; and, hark!
Down the rough slope the ponderous waggon rings;
Through rustling corn the hare astonish'd springs;
Slow tolls the village-clock the drowsy hour;
The partridge bursts away on whirring wings;
Deep mourns the turtle in sequester'd bower,
And shrill lark carols clear from her aërial tour.

XL.

O Nature, how in every charm supreme!
Whose votaries scass on raptures ever new!
O for the voice and fire of scraphim,
To sing thy glories with devotion due!
Blest be the day I 'scaped the wrangling crew,
From Pyrrho's maze, and Epicurus' sty;
And held high converse with the godlike sew,
Who to th' enraptur'd heart, and ear, and eye,
Teach beauty, virtue, truth, and love, and melody.

XLI.

Hence! ye, who snare and stupefy the mind,
Sophists, of beauty, virtue, joy, the bane!
Greedy and fell, though impotent and blind,
Who spread your filthy nets in Truth's fair fane,
And ever ply your venom'd fangs amain!
Hence to dark Error's den, whose rankling slime
First gave you form! hence! lest the Muse should deign,
(Though loath on theme so mean to waste a rhyme),
With vengeance to pursue your facrilegious crime.

XLII.

But hail, ye mighty mafters of the lay,
Nature's true fons, the friends of man and truth!
Whose song, sublimely sweet, serenely gay,
Amused my childhood, and inform'd my youth.
O let your spirit still my bosom sooth,
Inspire my dreams, and my wild wanderings guide!
Your voice each rugged path of life can smooth;
For well I know, where-ever ye reside,
There harmony, and peace, and innocence, abide.

XLIII.

Ah me! abandon'd on the lonesome plain,
As yet poor Edwin never knew your lore,
Save when against the winter's drenching rain,
And driving snow, the cottage shut the door.
'Then, as instructed by tradition hoar,
Her legends when the Beldam 'gan impart,
Or chant the old heroic ditty o'er,
Wonder and joy ran thrilling to his heart;
Much he the tale admired, but more the tuneful art.

XLIV.

Various and strange was the long-winded tale;
And halls, and knights, and seats of arms, display'd;
Or merry swains, who quast the nut-brown ale,
And sing, enamour'd of the nut-brown maid;
The moon-light revel of the fairy glade;
Or hags, that suckle an internal brood,
And ply in caves th' unutterable trade *,
'Midst fiends and spectres, quench the moon in blood,
Yell in the midnight storm, or ride th' insuriate shood.

XLV.

But when to horror his amazement rose,
A gentler strain the Beldam would rehearse,
A tale of rural life, a tale of woes,
The orphan-babes, and guardian uncle sterce.
O cruel! will no pang of pity pierce
That heart by lust of lucre sear'd to stone!
For sure, if aught of virtue last, or verse,
To latest times shall tender souls bemoan
Those helpless orphan-babes by thy fell arts undone.

XLVI.

Behold, with berries smear'd, with brambles torn, The babes now samish'd lay them down to die, 'Midst the wild howl of darksome woods forlorn, Folded in one another's arms they lie;

Nor friend, nor stranger, hears their dying cry:

For from the town the man returns no more.'

But thou, who Heaven's just vengeance darest defy, This deed with fruitless tears shalt soon deplore,

When Death lays waste thy house, and stames consume thy store.

XLVII.

A stissed smile of stern vindictive joy
Brighten'd one moment Edwin's starting tear.—

But why should gold man's seeble mind decoy,

And Innocence thus die by doom severe?

O Edwin! while thy heart is yet sincere,

Th' assaults of discontent and doubt repel:

Dark even at noontide is our mortal sphere;

But let us hope,—to doubt, is to rebel,—

Let us exult in hope, that all shall yet be well.

XLVIII.

Nor be thy generous indignation check'd,

Nor check'd the tender tear to Misery given;

From Guilt's contagious power shall that protect,

This soften and refine the soul for heaven.

[•] See the fine old ballad, called, THE CHILDREN-

But dreadful is their doom, whom doubt hath driven
To cenfure Fate, and pious Hope forego:
Like yonder blasted boughs by lightning riven,
Perfection, beauty, life, they never know,
But frown on all that pass, a monument of wo.

XLIX.

Shall he, whose birth, maturity, and age,
Scarce fill the circle of one summer-day,
Shall the poor gnat with discontent and rage
Exclaim, that Nature hastens to decay,
If but a cloud obstruct the solar ray,
If but a momentary shower descend!
Or shall frail man Heaven's dread decree gainsay,
Which bade the series of events extend
Wide through unnumber'd worlds, and ages withoutend!

One part, one little part, we dimly fcan
Through the dark medium of life's feverish dream;
Yet dare arraign the whole stupendous plan,
If but that little part incongruous feem.
Nor is that part perhaps what mortals deem;
Oft from apparent ill our blessings rife.
O then renounce that impious self-esteem,
That aims to trace the secrets of the skies:
For thou art but of dust; be humble, and be wife.

LI.

Thus Heaven enlarged his foul in riper years. For Nature gave him strength, and fire, to soar, On Fancy's wing, above this vale of tears; Where dark cold-hearted sceptics, creeping, pore Through microscope of metaphysic lore:
And much they grope for truth, but never hit.
For why? their powers, inadequate before,
This art preposterous renders more unsit;
Yet deem they darkness light, and their vain blunders wit.

T.II.

Nor was this ancient dame a foe to mirth.

Her ballad, jest, and riddle's quaint device.

Oft cheer'd the shepherds round their focial hearth;

Whom levity or spleen could ne'er entice.

To purchase chat or laughter at the price.

Of decency. Nor let it faith exceed,

That Nature forms a rustic taste so nice.—

Ah! had they been of court or city breed,

Such delicacy were right marvellous indeed.

LIII.

Oft when the winter-storm had ceas'd to rave,
He roam'd the snowy waste at even, to view
The cloud supendous, from th' Atlantic wave
High-towering, sail along th' horizon blue:
Where 'midst the changeful scenery ever new
Fancy a thousand wondrous forms descries
More wildly great than ever pencil drew,
Rocks, torrents, gulfs, and shapes of giant size,
And glittering cliss on cliss, and stery ramparts rise.

LIV.

Thence musing onward to the founding shore, The lone enthusiast oft would take his way, Listening with pleasing dread to the deep roar Of the wide-weltering waves. In black array When fulphurous clouds roll'd on the vernal day,
Even then he hasten'd from the haunt of man,
Along the darkening wilderness to stray,
What time the lightning's fierce career began,
And o'er heaven's rending arch the rattling thunder ran.

LV.

Responsive to the sprightly pipe when all.

In sprightly dance the village-youth were join'd,
Edwin, of melody aye held in thrall,
From the rude gambol far remote reclined,
Sooth'd with the soft notes warbling in the wind.
Ah then, all jollity seem'd noise and folly.
To the pure soul by Fancy's fire refined,
Ah what is mirth but turbulence unholy,
When with the charm compared of heavenly melancholy!

LVI.

Is there a heart that music cannot melt?

Ah me! how is that rugged heart forlorn!

Is there, who ne'er those mystic transports felt

Of solitude and melancholy born?

He needs not woo the Muse; he is her scorn.

The sophist's rope of cobweb he shall twine;

Mope o'er the schoolman's peevish page; or mourn,

And delve for life, in Mammon's dirty mine;

LVIL

For Edwin Fate a nobler doom had plann'd; Song was his favourite and first pursuit. The wild harp rang to his adventurous hand, And languish'd to his breath the plaintive slute, His infant muse, though artless, was not mute:
Of elegance as yet he took no care;
For this of time and culture is the fruit;
And Edwin gain'd at last this fruit so rare:
As in some suture verse I purpose to declare.

LVIII.

Meanwhile, whate'er of beautiful, or new, Sublime, or dreadful, in earth, fea, or sky, By chance, or search, was offer'd to his view, He scann'd with curious and romantic eye. Whate'er of lore tradition could supply From Gothic tale, or song, or sable old, Rous'd him, still keen to listen and to pry. At last, though long by penury control'd, And solitude, his soul her graces 'gan unfold.

Thus on the chill Lapponian's dreary land,
For many a long month lost in snow profound,
When Sol from Cancer sends the season bland,
And in their northern cave the storms hath bound;
From silent mountains, straight, with startling sound,
Torrents are burl'd; green hills emerge; and lo,
The trees with soliage, cliss with slowers are crown'd;
Pure rills through vales of verdure warbling go;
And wonder, love, and joy, the peasant's heart o'erslow.

Of chance or change O let not man complain,
Else shall he never never cease to wail:
For, from the imperial dome, to where the swain
Rears the lone cottage in the silent dale,
All feel th' assault of fortune's sickle gale;
Art, empire, earth itself, to change are doom'd;
Earthquakes have raised to heaven the humble vale,
And gulphs the mountain's mighty mass entomb'd,
And where th' Atlantick rolls wide continents have

But fure to foreign climes we need not range,
Nor fearch the ancient records of our race,
To learn the dire effects of time and change,
Which in ourselves, alas, we daily trace.
Yet at the darken'd eye, the wither'd face,
Or hoary hair, I never will repine:
But spare, O Time, whate'er of mental grace,
Of candour, love, or sympathy divine,
Whate'er of fancy's ray, or friendship's slame is mine.

·IH.

So I, obsequious to Truth's dread command, Shall here without reluctance change my lay, And smite the Gothic lyre with harsher hand; Now when I leave that flowery path for aye Of childhood, where I sported many a-day, Warbling and sauntering carelessy along; Where every face was innocent and gay, Each vale romantick, tuneful every tongue, Sweet, wild, and artless all, as Edwin's infant song.

IV.

'Perish the lore that deadens young desire'
Is the soft tenor of my song no more.
Edwin, though loved of heaven, must not aspire
To bliss, which mortals never knew before.
On trembling wings let youthful fancy soar,
Nor always haunt the sunny realms of joy;
But now and then the shades of life explore;
Though many a sound and sight of woe annoy,
And many a qualm of care his rising hopes destroy.

V.

Vigour from toil, from trouble patience grows.

The weakly bloffom, warm in fummer bower,
Some tints of transient beauty may disclose;
But ah it withers in the chilling hour.

Mark yonder oaks! Superiour to the power
Of all the warring winds of heaven they rise,
And from the stormy promontory tower,
And tos their giant arms amid the skies,
While each assailing blast increase of strength supplies.

VI.

And now the downy cheek and deepen'd voice
Gave dignity to Edwin's blooming prime;
And walks of wider circuit were his choice,
And vales more wild, and mountains more fublime.
One evening, as he framed the careless rhyme,
It was his chance to wander far abroad,
And o'er a lonely eminence to climb,
Which heretofore his foot had never trode;
A vale appear'd below, a deep retired abode.

VII.

Thither he hied, enamour'd of the scene:
For rocks on rocks piled, as by magic spell,
Here scorch'd with lightning, there with ivy green,
Fenced from the north and east this savage dell;
Southward a mountain rose with easy swell,
Whose long long groves eternal murmur made;
And toward the western sun a streamlet fell,
Where, through the cliss, the eye, remote, survey'd
Blue hills, and glittering waves, and skies in gold array'd.

VIII.

Along this narrow valley you might fee
The wild deer sporting on the meadow ground,
And, here and there, a solitary tree,
Or mossy stone, or rock with woodbine crown'd.
Oft did the cliss reverberate the sound
Of parted fragments tumbling from on high;
And from the summit of that craggy mound
The perching eagle oft was heard to cry,
Or on resounding wings to shoot athwart the sky.

IX.

One cultivated spot there was, that spread
Its slowery bosom to the noonday beam,
Where many a rose-bud rears its blushing head,
And herbs for food with suture plenty teem.
Sooth'd by the lulling sound of grove and stream
Romantick visions swarm on Edwin's soul:
He minded not the sun's last trembling gleam,
Nor heard from far the twilight cursew toll;
When slowly on his ear these moving accents stole.

- " Hail, awful fcenes, that calm the troubled breaft,
- " And woo the weary to profound repose;
- " Can passion's wildest uproar lay to rest,
- ' And whifper comfort to the man of woes!
- · Here Innocence may wander, fafe from foes,
- And Contemplation foar on feraph wings.
- O Solitude, the man who thee foregoes,
- When lucre lures him, or ambition flings,

XI.

- Vain man, is grandeur given to gay attire?
- ' Then let the butterfly thy pride upbraid :-
- " To friends, attendants, armies, bought with hire?
- It is thy weakness that requires their aid :-
- ' To palaces, with gold and gems inlay'd?
- They fear the thief, and tremble in the florm :-
- ' To hofts, through carnage who to conquest wade?
- " Behold the victor vanquish'd by the worm!
- Behold, what deeds of woe the locust can perform!

XII.

- ' True dignity is his, whose tranquil mind
- · Virtue has raised above the things below,
- ' Who, every hope and fear to heaven refign'd,
- " Shrinks not, though Fortune aim her deadlieft blow."
- This strain from midst the rocks was heard to flow. In solemn founds. Now beam'd the evening star;. And from embattled clouds emerging flow

Cynthia came riding on her filver car; And hoary mountain-cliffs shone faintly from afar.

XIII.

Soon did the folemn voice its theme renew; (While Edwin wrapt in wonder liftening stood)

- " Ye tools and toys of tyranny, adieu,
- ' Scorn'd by the wife, and hated by the good!
- "Ye only can engage the fervile brood

- " Of Levity and Lust, who, all their days,
- Ashamed of truth and liberty, have woo'd,
- And hug'd the chain, that glittering on their gaze:
- Seems to outshine the pomp of heaven's empyreal?

XIV.

- Like them, abandon'd to Ambition's fway,
- ' I fought for glory in the paths of guile;
- And fawn'd and fmiled, to plunder and betray,
- ' Myself betray'd and plunder'd all the while;
- ' So gnaw'd the viper the corroding file.
- But now with pangs of keen remorfe I rue
- 4 Those years of trouble and debasement vile .-
- Yet why should I this cruel theme pursue!
- Fly, fly, detelled thoughts, for ever from my view.

XV.

- The gusts of appetite, the clouds of care,
- And storms of disappointment, all o'erpast,

- " And if for me no treasure be amass'd,
- ' And if no future age shall hear my name,
- ' I lurk the more secure from fortune's blaft,
- ' And with more leifure feed this pious flame,
- Whose rapture far transcends the fairest hopes of fame.

XVI.

- The end and the reward of toil is reft.
- Be all my prayer for virtue and for peace.
- ' Of wealth and fame, of pomp and power posses'd,
- Who ever felt his weight of woe decreafe!
- " Ah! what avails the love of Rome and Greece,
- The lay heaven-prompted, and harmonious string,
- ' The dust of Ophir, or the Tyrian fleece,
- ' All that art, fortune, enterprise, can bring,

XVII.

- Let Vanity adorn the marble tomb
- With trophies, rhymes, and scutcheons of renown,
- In the deep dungeon of fome Gothic dome,
- Where night and defolation ever frown.
- ' Mine be the breezy hill that skirts the down;
- . Where a green graffy turf is all I crave,
- With here and there a violet bestrown,
- Fast by a brook, or fountain's murmuring wave;
- And many an evening fun shine sweetly on my grave.

XVIII.

- ' And thither let the village swain repair;
- And, light of heart, the village maiden gay,

 - And celebrate the merry morn of May.
 - 'There let the shepherd's pipe the live-long day
 - ' Fill all the grove with love's bewitching wo;
 - ' And when mild Evening comes with mantle grey,
 - Let not the blooming band make hafte to go;
- No ghost nor spell my long and last abode shall know.

XIX.

- For though I fly to scape from Fortune's rage,
- " And bear the scars of envy, spite, and scorn,
- ' Yet with mankind no horrid war I wage,
- · Yet with no impious spleen my breast is torn:
- ' For virtue loft, and ruin'd man, I mourn.
- O Man, creation's pride, heaven's darling child,
- Whom nature's best divinest gifts adorn,

- And all thy favourite haunts with blood and tears de-

- Along you glittering fky what glory streams!
- " What majesty attends night's lovely queen!
- " Fair laugh our vallies in the vernal beams;
- " And mountains rise, and oceans roll between,
- ' And all conspire to beautify the scene.
- " But, in the mental world, what chaos drear!
- What forms of mournful, loathfome, furious mien!
- " O when shall that Eternal Morn appear,
- * These dreadful forms to chase, this chaos dark to clear?

MXI.

- * O Thou, at whose creative smile, you heaven,
- ' In all the pomp of beauty, life, and light,
- * Rose from th' abys; when dark Confusion, driven

 - ' Fled, where he ever flies thy piercing fight!
 - O glance on these sad shades one pitying ray,
- " To blaft the fury of oppressive might,
- ' Melt the hard heart to love and mercy's fway,
- And chear the wandering foul, and light him on the way.

XXII.

Silence enfued: and Edwin raised his eyes In tears, for grief lay heavy at his heart.

- " And is it thus in courtly life' (he cries)
- ' That man to man acts a betrayer's part ?
- And dares he thus the gifts of heaven pervert,
- * Each focial inflinet, and fublime defire!-
- ' Hail Poverty! if honour, wealth, and art,
- ' If what the great purfue, and learn'd admire,
- Thus diffipate and quench the foul's ethereal fire?

XXIII.

He faid, and turn'd away; nor did the Sage O'erhear, in filent orifons employ'd. The Youth, his rifing forrow to affuage, Home as he hied, the evening fcene enjoy'd: For now no cloud obscures the starry void; The yellow moonlight sleeps on all the hills; Nor is the mind with startling sounds annoy'd, A soothing murmur the lone region fills, Of groves, and dying gales, and melanchely rills.

XXIV.

But he from day to day more anxions grew.
The voice still feem'd to vibrate on his ear.
Nor durst he hope the Hermit's tale untrue;
For man he feem'd to love, and heaven to fear;
And none speaks false, where there is none to hear.

- ' Yet, can man's gentle heart become fo fell!
- ' No more in vain conjecture let me wear
- ' My hours away, but feek the Hermit's cell;
- "Tis he my doubt can clear, perhaps my care difpel."

XXV.

At early dawn the Youth his journey took,
And many a mountain pass'd, and valley wide,
Then reach'd the wild; where, in a flowery nook,
And seated on a mossy stone, he spied
An antient man: his harp lay him beside.
A stag sprang from the passure at his call,
And, kneeling, lick'd the wither'd hand, that tied
A wreathe of woodbine round his antiers tall,
And hung his losty neck with many a sloweret small.

XXVI.

And now the hoary Sage arose, and saw The wanderer approaching: innocence Smiled on his glowing cheek, but modest awe Depress'd his eye, that fear'd to give offence.

- " Who art thou, courteous stranger? and from whence?
- " Why roam thy steps to this abandon'd dale?"
- ' A shepherd-boy (the Youth replied), far hence
- " My habitation; hear my artless tale;
- Nor levity nor falthood shall thine ear asfail.

XXVII.

- Late as I roam'd, intent on Nature's charms,
- I reach'd at eve this wilderness profound;
- 4 And, leaning where you oak expands her arms,
- · Heard these rude cliffs thine awful voice rebound,
- .4 (For in thy speech I recognise the found.)
 - ' You mourn'd for ruin'd man, and virtue loft,
- And feem'd to feel of keen remorfe the wound,
- ' Pondering on former days, by guilt engross'd,
- Or in the giddy storm of dishipation tos'd.

XXVIII.

- But fay, in courtly life can craft be learn'd,
- Where knowledge opens, and exalts the foul;
- Where Fortune lavishes her gifts unearn'd,
- Can felfishness the liberal heart control?
- ' Is glory there achiev'd by arts, as foul
- As those which felons, fiends, and furies plan?
- Spiders enfnare, snakes poison, tygers prowl;
- Love is the godlike attribute of man.
- 4. O teach a simple Youth this mystery to scan.

XXIX.

- Or elie the lamentable strain disclaim,
- ' And give me back the calm, contented mind;
- Which, late, exulting, view'd, in Nature's frame,
- " Goodness untainted, wisdom unconfined,
- Grace, grandeur, and utility combined.
- Restore those tranquil days, that saw me still
- " Well pleased with all, but most with humankind;
- ' When Fancy roam'd through Nature's works at will,
- " Uncheck'd by cold diftruft, and uninform'd of ill."

XXX.

- Wouldst thou (the Sage replied) in peace return
- ' To the gay dreams of fond romantick youth,
- ' Leave me to hide, in this remote fojourn,
- ' From every gentle ear the dreadful truth:
- ' For if my defultory strain with ruth
- " And indignation make thine eyes o'erflow,
- Alas! what comfort could thy anguish footh,
- ' Shouldst thou th' extent of human folly know.
- · Be ignorance thy choice, where knowledge leads to wo.

XXXI.

- · But let untender thoughts afar be driven;
- ' Nor venture to arraign the dread decree:
- ' For know, to man, as candidate for heaven,
- ' The voice of The Eternal faid, Be free:
- ' And this divine prerogative to thee
- Does virtue, happiness, and heaven convey;
- ' For virtue is the child of liberty,
- ' And happiness of virtue; nor can they
- Be free to keep the path who are not free to fray.

XXXII.

- " Yet leave me not. I would allay that grief,
- Which elfe might thy young virtue overpower;
- . And in thy converse I shall find relief,
 - · When the dark shades of melancholy lower;
 - ' For folitude has many a dreary hour,
 - ' Even when exempt from grief, remorie, and pain:
 - Come often then; for, haply, in my bower,
 - ' Amusement, knowledge, wisdom thou may'st gain:
- If I one foul improve, I have not lived in vain.'

XXXIII.

And now, at length, to Edwin's ardent gaze
The Muse of history unrolls her page.
But sew, alas! the scenes her art displays,
To charm his fancy, or his heart engage.
Here Chiefs their thirst of power in blood asswage,
And straight their slames with tenfold sierceness burn:
Here smiling Virtue prompts the patriot's rage,
But lo, erelong, is lest alone to mourn,
And languish in the dust, and class th' abandon'd urn.

XXXIV.

- ' Ah, what avails (he faid) to trace the fprings
- 'That whirl of empire the stupendous wheel!
- ' Ah, what have I to do with conquering kings,
- ' Hands drench'd in blood, and breaths begirt with
- ' To those, whom Nature taught to think and feel,
- · Heroes, alas! are things of fmall concern.
- . Could History man's secret heart reveal,
- And what imports a heaven-born mind to learn,
- · Her transcripts to explore what bosom would not yearn!

XXXV.

- * This praise, O Cheronean Sage *, is thine.
- " (Why should this praise to thee alone belong!)
- 4 All else from Nature's moral path decline,
- ' Lured by the toys that captivate the throng;
- 'To herd in cabinets and camps, among
- ' Spoil, carnage, and the cruel pomp of pride;
- Or chaunt of heraldry the drowfy fong,
- ' How tyrant blood, o'er many a region wide,
- 2 Rolls to a thousand thrones its execrable tide.

XXXVI.

- ' O who of man the story will unfold,
- ' Ere victory and empire wrought annoy,
- ' In that elysian age (misnamed of gold)
- 'The age of love, and innocence, and joy,
- 'When all were great and free! man's fole employ
- ' To deck the bosom of his parent earth;
- ' Or toward his bower the murmuring stream decoy,
- 'To aid the floweret's long-expected birth,
- And lull the bed of peace, and crown the board of mirth.

XXXVII.

- Sweet were your shades, O ye primeval groves,
- . Whose boughs to man his food and shelter lent,
- ' Pure in his pleasures, happy in his loves,
- · His eye still smiling, and his heart content.
- ' Then, hand in hand, Health, Sport, and Labour went.
- " Nature supply'd the with the taught to crave.
- None prowl'd for prey, none watch'd to circumvent.
- 'To all an equal lot Heaven's bounty gave :
- No vaffal fear'd his lord, no tyrant fear'd his flave.

· PLUTABON.

XXXVIII.

- ' But ah! th' Historick Muse has never dared
- 'To pierce those hallow'd bowers: 'tis Fancy's beam
- e Pour'd on the vision of th' enraptured Bard,
- " That paints the charms of that delicious theme.
- "Then hail fweet Fancy's ray! and hail the dream
- That weans the weary foul from guilt and woe!
- " Careless what others of my choice may deem,
- ' I long where Love and Fancy lead to go,
- And meditate on heaven; enough of earth I know.'

XXXIX.

- 'I cannot blame thy choice (the Sage replied)
- ' For foft and fmooth are Fancy's flowery ways.
- ' And yet, even there, if left without a guide,
- 'The young adventurer unfafely plays.
- Eyes dazzled long by Fiction's gaudy rays
- In modest Truth no light nor beauty find.
- ' And who, my child, would trust the meteor-blaze,
- 'That foon must fail, and leave the wanderer blind,
- ' More dark and helpless far, than if it ne'er had shined?

XL.

- ' Fancy enervates, while it fooths, the heart,
- · And, while it dazzles, wounds the mental fight:
- ' To joy each heightening charm it can impart,
- ' But wraps the hour of wo in tenfold night.
- ' And often, where no real ills affright,
- ' Its visionary fiends, an endless train,
- ' Affail with equal or fuperior might,
- ' And through the throbbing heart, and dizzy brain,
- And shivering nerves, shoot stings of more than mortal

XLI.

- "And yet, alas, the real ills of life
- 'Claim the full vigour of a mind prepared,
- ' Prepared for patient, long, laborious strife,
- ' Its guide Experience, and Truth its guard.
- We fare on earth as other men have fared:
- Were they successful ? Let not us despair.
- Was disappointment oft their sole reward?
- ' Yet shall their tale instruct, if it declare,
- 'How they have borne the load ourselves are doom'd to

XLII.

- ' What charms th' Historick Muse adorn, from spoils,
- "And blood, and tyrants, when she wings her flight,
- 'To hail the patriot Prince, whose pious toils
- Sacred to science, liberty, and right,
- And peace, through every age divinely bright
- ' Shall shine the boast and wonder of mankind!
- Sees yonder fun, from his meridian height,
- " A lovelier fcene, than Virtue thus inshrined
- In power, and man with man for mutual aid combined?

XLIII.

- ' Hail facred Polity, by Freedom rear'd!
- ' Hail facred Freedom, when by Law reftrain'd!
- Without you what were man? A groveling herd
- "In darkness, wretchedness, and want enchain'd.
- "Sublimed by you, the Greek and Roman reign'd
- 'In arts unrival'd : O, to latest days,
- "In Albion may your influence unprofaned
- "To godlike worth the generous bosom raite,
- And prompt the Sage's lore, and fire the poet's lays.

XLIV.

- But now let other themes our care engage.
- For lo, with modest yet majestick grace,
- "To curb Imagination's lawlefs rage,
- And from within the cherish'd heart to brace,
- ' Philosophy appears. The gloomy race
- By Indolence and moping Fancy bred,
- ' Fear, Discontent, Solicitude give place,
- ' And Hope and Courage brighten in their stead,
- While on the kindling foul her vital beams are shed.

XLV.

- 'Then waken from long lethargy to life *
- ' The feeds of happiness, and powers of thought;
- 'Then jarring appetites forego their strife,
- ' A strife by ignorance to madness wrought.
- ' Pleasure by savage man is dearly bought
- ' With fell revenge, lust that defies controul,
- ' With gluttony and death. The mind untaught
- ' Is a dark waste, where fiends and tempests howl;
- As Phebus to the world, is Science to the foul.

^{*} The influence of the Philosophick Spirit—in humanizing the mind, and preparing it for intellectual exertion and delicate pleasure;—in exploring, by the help of geometry, the system of the universe;—in banishing superstition;—in promoting navigation, agriculture, medicine, and moral and political science:—from Stanza XLV, to Stanza LV.

XLVI.

- And Reason now through Number, Time, and Space,
- ' Darts the keen luftre of her ferious eye,
- ' And learns, from facts compared, the laws to trace,
- Whose long progression leads to Deity.
- ' Can mortal strength presume to foar so high!
- ' Can mortal fight, fo oft bedim'd with tears,
- ' Such glory bear !- for lo, the shadows fly
- ' From nature's face; Confusion disappears,
- And order charms the eyes, and harmony the ears.

XLVII.

- ' In the deep windings of the grove, no more
- 'The hag obscene, and griefly phantom dwell;
- Nor in the fall of mountain-ffream, or roar
- " Of winds, is heard the angry spirit's yell;
- ' No wizard mutters the tremendous spell,
- Nor finks convulfive in prophetick fwoon;
- ' Nor bids the noise of drums and trumpets swell,
- 'To ease of fancied pangs the labouring moon,
- or chace the shade that blots the blazing orb of noon.

XLVIII.

- " Many a long-lingering year, in lonely ifle,
- ' Stun'd with th' eternal turbulence of waves,
- ' Lo, with dim eyes, that never learn'd to smile,
- 4 And trembling hands, the familh'd native craves
- Of Heaven his wretched fare: shivering in caves,
- ' Or fcorch'd on rocks, he pines from day to day;
- But Science gives the word; and lo, he braves
- 'The furge and tempest, lighted by her ray,
- And to a happier land wafts merrily away.

XLIX.

- And even where Nature loads the teeming plain
- " With the full pomp of vegetable store,
- ' Her bounty, unimproved, is deadly bane:
- Dark woods and rankling wilds, from thore to thore,
- ' Stretch their enormous gloom; which to explore
- ' Even Fancy trembles, in her fprightliest mood;
- ' For there, each eyeball gleams with lust of gore,
- Nestles each murderous and each monstrous brood,
- ' Plague lurks in every shade, and steams from every flood.

L.

- "Twas from Philosophy man learn'd to tame
- 'The foil by plenty to intemperance fed.
- ' Lo, from the echoing ax, and thundering flame,
- ' Poison and plague and yelling rage are fled.
- 'The waters, bursting from their slimy bed,
- ' Bring health and melody to every vale:
- ' And, from the breezy main, and mountain's head,
- ' Ceres and Flora, to the funny dale,
- "To fan their glowing charms, invite the fluttering gaie.

LI.

- What dire necessities on every hand
- Our art, our strength, our fortitude require!
- Of foes intestine what a numerous band
- · Against this little throb of life conspire!
- 'Yet Science can elude their fatal ire
- ' A while, and turn afide Death's level'd dart,
 - ' Sooth the sharp pang, allay the fever's fire,
 - ' And brace the nerves once more, and cheer the heart,
- And yet a few foft nights and balmy days impart.

LII.

- Nor less to regulate man's moral frame
- Science exerts her all-composing fway.
- ' Flutters thy breast with fear, or pants for fame,
- ' Or pines to Indolence and Spleen a prey,
- ' Or Avarice, a fiend more fierce than they?
- ' Flee to the shade of Academus' grove;
- Where cares molest not, discord melts away
- ' In harmony, and the pure passions prove
- ' How fweet the words of truth breathed from the lips

LIII.

- ' What cannot Art and Industry perform,
- 'When Science plans the progress of their toil!
- ' They smile at penury, disease, and storm;
- And oceans from their mighty mounds recoil.
- When tyrants fcourge, or demagogues embroil
- ' A land, or when the rabble's headlong rage
- ' Order transforms to anarchy and spoil,
- Deep-verfed in man the philosophick Sage
- ' Prepares with lenient hand their phrenzy to affwage.

LIV.

- "Tis he alone, whose comprehensive mind,
- ' From fituation, temper, foil, and clime
- ' Explored, a nation's various powers can bind
- ' And various orders, in one Form fublime
- Of polity, that, midst the wrecks of time,
- Secure shall lift its head on high, nor fear
- 'Th' affault of foreign or domestick crime,
- While publick faith, and publick love fincere,
- ' And Industry and Law maintain their sway severe.'

LV.

Enraptured by the Hermit's strain, the Youth Proceeds the path of Science to explore. And now, expanding to the beams of Truth, New energies, and charms unknown before, His mind discloses: Fancy now no more Wantons on fickle pinion through the fkies: But, fix'd in aim, and conscious of her power-Sublime from cause to cause exults to rife. Creation's blended flores arranging as the flies.

LVI.

Nor love of novelty alone infpires, Their laws and nice dependencies to fcan: For, mindful of the aids that life requires, And of the fervices man owes to man. He meditates new arts on Nature's plan: The cold desponding breast of Sloth to warm, The flame of Industry and Genius fan. And Emulation's noble rage alarm. And the long hours of Toil and Solitude to charm,

LVII.

But She, who fet on fire his infant heart, And all his dreams, and all his wanderings shared And blefs'd, the Muse, and her celestial art, Still claim th' Enthusiast's fond and first regard. From Nature's beauties variously compared And variously combined, he learns to frame Those forms of bright perfection, which the Bard, While boundless hopes and boundless views inflame, Enamour'd confecrates to never-dying fame.

LVIII.

Of late, with cumbersome, though pompous show,
Edwin would oft his flowery rhyme deface,
Through ardour to adorn; but Nature now
To his experienced eye a modest grace
Presents, where Ornament the second place
Holds, to intrinsick worth and just design
Subservient still. Simplicity apace
Tempers his rage: he owns her charm divine,
And clears th' ambiguous phrase, and lops th' unwieldy line.

LIX.

Fain would I fing (much yet unfung remains)
What fweet delirium o'er his bosom stole,
When the great Shepherd of the Mantuan plains *
His deep majestick melody 'gan roll:
Fain would I fing, what transport storm'd his soul,
How the red current throb'd his veins along,
When, like Pelides, bold beyond controul,
Gracefully terrible, sublimely strong, (song.
Homer raised high to heaven the loud, th' impetuous

LX.

And how his lyre, though rude her first essays,
Now skill'd to sooth, to triumph, to complain,
Warbling at will through each harmonious maze,
Was taught to modulate the artful strain,
I sain would sing:—but ah! I strive in vain.—
Sighs from a breaking heart my voice consound.—
With trembling step, to join you weeping train,
I haste, where gleams sunereal glare around,
And, mix'd with shrieks of woe, the knells of death resound.

LXI.

Adieu, ye lays, that fancy's flowers adorn, The foft amusement of the vacant mind! He fleeps in dust, and all the Muses mourn, He, whom each Virtue fired, each grace refined, Friend, teacher, pattern, darling of mankind! "-He fleeps in dust .- Ah, how should I pursue My theme! To heart-confuming grief refign'd Here on his recent grave I fix my view, And pour my bitter tears .- Ye flowery lays, adieu!

LXII.

Art thou, my G, for ever fled! And am I left to unavailing woe! When fortune's storms affail this weary head, Where cares long fince have fled untimely fnow, Ah, now for comfort whither shall I go! No more thy foothing voice my anguish chears: Thy placid eyes with fmiles no longer glow, My hopes to cherish, and allay my fears.-"Tis meet that I should mourn :- flow forth afresh my tears.

RETIREMENT.*

The lingering light decays,
And Hesper on the front of heaven
His glittering gem displays;
Deep in the silent vale, unseen,
Beside a lulling stream,
A pensive Youth of placid mien,
Indulged this tender theme.

Ye cliffs, in hoary grandeur piled
High o'er the glimmering dale;
Ye woods, along whose windings wild
Murmurs the solemn gale;
Where Melancholy strays forlorn,
And Woe retires to weep,
What time the wan moon's yellow horn
Gleams on the western deep:

^{*} This, and most of the following pieces, are taken from a Collection of juvenile Poems by the same hand, published many years ago. The Editor hopes they will be agreeable to his readers: but it was with difficulty he could prevail on the Author to consent to their being reprinted.

To you, ye wastes, whose artless charms Ne'er drew Ambition's eye, Scaped a tumultuous world's alarms, To your retreats I fly.

Deep in your most sequester'd bower Let me at last recline,

Where Solitude, mild, modest Power,

Leans on her ivy'd shrine.

How shall I woo thee, matchless Fair!
Thy heavenly smile how win!
Thy smile, that smooths the brow of Care,
And stills the storm within.
O wilt thou to thy favourite grove
Thinc ardent votary bring,
And bless his hours, and bid them move
Serene, on silent wing.

Oft let remembrance footh his mind With dreams of former days, When in the lap of Peace reclined He framed his infant lays; When Fancy roved at large, nor Care-Nor cold Diftruft alarm'd, Nor Envy with malignant glare His simple youth had harm'd.

Twas then, O Solitude, to thee His early vows were paid, From heart fincere, and warm, and free, Devoted to the shade. Ah why did Fate his steps decoy In stormy paths to roam, Remote from all congenial joy!— O take the Wanderer home.

Thy shades, thy silence, now be mine,
Thy charms my only theme;
My haunt the hollow cliff, whose pine
Waves o'er the gloomy stream,
Whence the scared owl on pinions grey
Breaks from the rustling boughs,
And down the lone vale fails away
To more profound repose.

O while to thee the woodland pours
Its wildly warbling fong,
And balmy from the bank of flowers
The zephyr breathes along;
Let no rude found invade from far,
No vagrant foot be nigh,
No ray from Grandeur's gilded car,
Flash on the startled eye.

But if some pilgrim through the glade. Thy hallow'd bowers explore,
O guard from harm his hoary head,
And listen to his lore;
For he of joys divine shall tell
'That wean from earthly woe,
And triumph o'er the mighty spell.
That chains this heart below.

For me no more the path invites

Ambition loves to tread;

No more I climb those toilsome heights

By guileful Hope misled;

Leaps my fond sluttering heart no more

To Mirth's enlivening strain;

For present pleasure soon is o'er,

E L E G Y.

STILL shall unthinking man substantial deem
The forms that fleet through life's deceitful dream?
On clouds, where Fancy's beam amusive plays,
Shall heedless Hope the towering fabric raise?
Till at Death's touch the fairy visions fly,
And real scenes rush dismal on the eye;
And from Elysium's balmy slumber torn
The startled soul awakes, to think, and mourn.

O ye, whose hours in jocund train advance,
Whose spirits to the song of gladness dance,
Who slowery vales in endless view survey
Glittering in beams of visionary day;
O, yet while Fate delays th' impending woe,
Be roused to thought, anticipate the blow;
Lest, like the lightning's glance, the sudden ill
Flash to consound, and penetrate to kill;
Lest, thus encompass'd with sunereal gloom,
Like me, ye bend o'er some untimely tomb,
Pour your wild ravings in Night's frighted ear,
And half pronounce Heaven's facred doom severe.

Wife, Beanteous, Good! O every grace combined, That charms the eye, or captivates the mind! Fair, as the floweret opening on the morn, Whose leaves bright drops of liquid pearl adorn! Sweet, as the downy-pinion'd gale, that roves To gather fragrance in Arabian groves!

Mild, as the strains, that, at the close of day, Warbling remote, along the vales decay !-Yet, why with these compared? What tints so fine, What fweetness, mildness, can be match'd with thine? Why roam abroad? Since still, to Fancy's eyes, I fee, I fee thy lovely form arise. Still let me gaze, and every care beguile, Gaze on that cheek, where all the Graces smile; That foul-expressing eye, benignly bright, Where meekness beams ineffable delight; That brow, where Wisdom sits enthroned serene, Each feature forms, and dignifies the mien: Still let me listen, while her words impart The fweet effusions of the blameless heart, Till all my foul, each tumult charm'd away, Yields, gently led, to Virtue's eafy fway.

By thee inspired, O Virtue, Age is young,
And musick warbles from the faltering tongue:
Thy ray creative cheers the clouded brow,
And decks the faded cheek with rosy glow,
Brightens the joyless aspect, and supplies
Pure heavenly lustre to the languid eyes:
But when Youth's living bloom reslects thy beams,
Resistless on the view the glory streams,
Love, Wonder, Joy, alternately alarm,
And Beauty dazzles with angelic charm.

Ah whither fled!——ye dear illusions stay—
Lo, pale and silent lies the lovely clay.—
How are the roses on that cheek decay'd,
Which late the purple light of youth display'd!
Health on her form each sprightly grace bestow'd;
With life and thought each speaking seature glow'd.—

Fair was the flower, and foft the vernal sky; Elate with hope we deem'd no tempest nigh; When lo, a whirlwind's instantaneous gust Left all its beauties withering in the dust.

All cold the hand, that foothed Woe's weary head! And quench'd the eye, the pitying tear that shed! And mute the voice, whose pleasing accents stole, Infusing balm, into the rankled foul! O Death, why arm with cruelty thy power, And spare the idle weed, yet lop the flower! Why fly thy shafts in lawless error driven! Is Virtue then no more the care of Heaven !-But peace, bold thought! be still my bursting heart! We, not ELIZA, felt the fatal dart. Scaped the dark dungeon does the flave complain, Nor blefs the hand that broke the galling chain? Say, pines not Virtue for the lingering morn, On this dark wild condemn'd to roam forlorn? Where Reason's meteor-rays, with sickly glow, O'er the dun gloom a dreadful glimmering throw? Disclosing dubious to th' affrighted eye O'erwhelming mountains tottering from on high, Black billowy feas in storm perpetual tofs'd, And weary ways in wildering labyrinths loft. O happy stroke, that burits the bonds of clay, Darts through the rending gloom the blaze of day, And wings the foul with boundless flight to foar, Where dangers threat, and fears alarm no more.

Transporting thought! here let me wipe away. The tear of grief, and wake a bolder lay. But ah! the swimming eye o'erslows anew,.

Nor check the facred drops to pity due;

Lo, where in speechless, hopeless anguish, bend O'er her loved dust, the Parent, Brother, Friend! How vain the hope of man!—But cease thy strain, Nor Sorrow's dread solemnity profane; Mix'd with you drooping Mourners, on her bier In silence shed the sympathetick tear.

TO HOPE.

I. I.

O'THOU, who glad'st the pensive soul,
More than Aurora's smile the swain forlorn,
Left all night long to mourn
Where desolation frowns, and tempests howl;
And shricks of Woe, as intermits the storm,
Far o'er the monstrous wilderness resound,
And cross the gloom darts many a shapeless form,
And many a sire-eyed visage glares around.
O come, and be once more my guest.
Come, for thou oft thy suppliant's vow hast heard,
And oft with smiles indulgent chear'd.
And soothed him into rest.

I. 2.

Smit by thy rapture-beaming eye
Deep flashing through the midnight of their mind,
The sable bands combined,
Where Fear's black banner bloats the troubled sky,
Appall'd retire. Suspicion hides her head,
Nor dares th' obliquely gleaming eyeball raise;
Despair, with gorgon-figured veil o'erspread,
Speeds to dark Phlegethon's detested maze.

Lo, startled at the heavenly ray,
With speed unwonted Indolence upsprings,
And, heaving, lifts her leaden wings,
And sullen glides away:

I. 3.

Ten thousand forms, by pining Fancy view'd, Diffolye .- Above the fparkling flood When Phebus rears his awful brow. From lengthening lawn and valley low The troops of fen-born mists retire. Along the plain The joyous fwain Eyes the gay villages again, And gold-illumined fpire; While on the billowy ether borne Floats the loofe lay's jovial measure: And light along the fairy Pleafure, Her green robes glittering to the morn, Wantons on filken wing. And goblins all To the damp dungeon shrink, or hoary hall, Or westward, with impetuous flight, Shoot to the defart realms of their congenial Night.

II. T.

When first on Childhood's eager gaze
Life's varied landscape, stretch'd immense around,
Starts out of night profound,
Thy voice incites to tempt th' untrodden maze.
Fond he surveys thy mild maternal face,
His bashful eye still kindling as he views,
And, while thy lenient arm supports his pace,
With beating heart the upland path pursues:

The path that leads, where, hung fublime, And feen afar, youth's gallant trophies, bright In Fancy's rainbow ray, invite His wingy nerves to climb.

II. 2.

Purfue thy pleasurable way,
Safe in the guidance of thy heavenly guard,
While melting airs are heard,
And soft-eyed cherub forms around thee play:
Simplicity, in careless flowers array'd,
Prattling amusive in his accent meek;
And Modesty, half turning as afraid,
The smile just dimpling on his glowing cheek;
Content and Leisure, hand in hand
With Innocence and Peace, advance, and sing;
And Mirth, in many a mazy ring,
Frisks o'er the flowery land.

II. 3.

Frail man, how various is thy lot below!
To-day though gales propitious blow,
And Peace foft gliding down the sky
Lead Love along and Harmony,
To-morrow the gay scene deforms;
Then all around
The thunder's found
Rolls rattling on through heaven's profound,
And down rush all the storms.
Ye days, that balmy influence shed,
When sweet Childhood, ever sprightly,
In paths of pleasure sported lightly,
Whither, ah whither are ye fied!

Ye cherub train, that brought him on his way,
O leave him not midst tumult and dismay;
For now youth's eminence he gains:
But what a weary length of lingering toil remains:

HI. I.

They shrink, they vanish into air.

Now Slander taints with pestilence the gale;
And mingling cries assail,

The wail of Woe, and groan of grim Despair.

Lo, wizard Envy from his serpent eye

Darts quick destruction in each baleful glance;

Pride smiling stern, and yellow Jealousy,

Frowning Disdain, and haggard Hate advance;

Behold, amidst the dire array,

Pale wither'd Care his giant-stature rears,

And lo, his iron hand prepares

To grasp its feeble prey.

III. 2.

Who now will guard bewilder'd youth
Safe from the fierce affaults of hostile rage?
Such war can Virtue wage,
Virtue, that bears the facred shield of Truth?
Alas! full oft on Guilt's victorious car
The spoils of Virtue are in triumph borne;
While the fair captive, mark'd with many a scar,
In lone obscurity, oppress'd, forlorn,
Resigns to tears her angel form.
Ill-fated youth, then whither wilt thou sty?
No friend, no shelter now is nigh,
And onward rolls the storm.

III. 3.

But whence the sudden beam that shoots along? Why shrink aghast the hostile throng? Lo, from amidst Affliction's night, Hope bursts all radiant on the sight: Her words the troubled bosom sooth.

- " Why thus difmay'd?
- " Though foes invade,
- " Hope ne'er is wanting to their aid,
- " Who tread the path of truth.
- "Tis I, who fmooth the rugged way,
- " I, who close the eyes of Sorrow,
- " And with glad visions of to-morrow
- " Repair the weary foul's decay.
- " When Death's cold touch thrills to the freezing heart,
- " Dreams of heaven's opening glories I impart,
- " Till the freed spirit springs on high
- " In rapture too fevere for weak Mortality."

PYGMÆO-GERANO-MACHIA,

THE BATTLE OF

THE PYGMIES AND CRANES.

From the Latin of ADDISON.

THE pygmy people, and the feather'd train,
Mingling in mortal combat on the plain,
I fing. Ye Muses, favour my designs,
Lead on my squadrons, and arrange the lines;
The flashing swords and fluttering wings display,
And long bills nibbling in the bloody fray;
Cranes darting with disdain on tiny foes,
Conslicting birds and men, and war's unnumber'd woes.

The wars and woes of heroes fix feet long
Have oft resounded in Pierian song.
Who has not heard of Colchos' golden sleece,
And Argo mann'd with all the flower of Greece?
Of Thebes' sell brethren, Theseus stern of sace,
And Peleus' son unrival'd in the race,
Eneas sounder of the Roman line,
And William glorious on the banks of Boyne?
Who has not learn'd to weep at Pompey's wees,
And over Blackmore's Epic page to doze?

"Tis I, who dare attempt unusual strains,
Of hosts unsung, and unfrequented plains;
The small shrill trump, and chiefs of little size,
And armies rushing down the darken'd skies.

Where India reddens to the early dawn, Winds a deep vale from vulgar eye withdrawn: Bosomed in groves the lowly region lies, And rocky mountains round the border rife. Here, till the doom of fate its fall decreed. The empire flourish'd of the pygmy-breed; Here Industry perform'd, and Genius plan'd. And bufy multitudes o'erfpread the land. But now to these lone bounds if pilgrim stray, Tempting through craggy cliffs the desperate way, He finds the puny mansion fallen to earth, Its godlings mouldering on th' abandon'd hearth; And flarts, where small white bones are spread around. " Or little footsteps lightly print the ground;" While the proud crane her neft fecurely builds, Chattering amid the defolated fields.

But different fates befel her hostile rage,
While reign'd, invincible through many an age,
The dreaded Pygmy: roused by war's alarms
Forth rush'd the madding Mannikin to arms.
Fierce to the field of death the hero flies;
The faint crane fluttering flaps the ground, and dies;
And by the victor borne (o'erwheiming load!)
With bloody bill loose-dangling marks the road.
And oft the wily dwarf in ambush lay,
And often made the callow young his prey;
With slaughter'd victims heap'd his board, and smiled
To visit the sire's trespass on the child.

Oft, where his feather'd foe had rear'd her neft,.
And laid her eggs and household gods to rest,
Burning for blood, in terrible array,
'The eighteen-inch militia burst their way:
All went to wreck; the infant foeman fell,
When scarce his chirping bill had broke the shell.

Loud uproar hence, and rage of arms arose,
And the fell rancour of encountering foes;
Hence dwarfs and cranes one general havock whelms,
And Death's grim visage scares the pygmy-realms.
Not half so furious blazed the warlike fire
Of Mice, high theme of the Meonian lyre;
When bold to battle march'd th' accouter'd frogs,
And the deep tumult thunder'd through the bogs.
Pierced by the javelin-bulrush on the shore
Here agonizing roll'd the mouse in gore;
And there the frog (a scene full sad to see!)
Shorn of one leg slow sprawl'd along on three:
He vaults no more with vigorous hops on high,
But mourns in hoarsest croaks his destiny.

And now the day of woe drew on apace,

A day of woe to all the pygmy-race,

When dwarfs were doom'd (but penitence was vain)

To rue each broken egg, and chicken flain.

For roufed to vengeance by repeated wrong

Erom diftant climes the long-bill'd legions throng:

From Strymon's lake, Cayster's plashy meads,

And fens of Scythia green with rustling reeds;

From where the Danube winds through many a land,

And Mareotis laves th' Egyptian strand,

To rendesvous they wast on eager wing,

And wait assembled the returning spring.

Meanwhile they trim their plumes for length of flight, Whet their keen beaks, and twisting claws, for fight; Each crane the pygmy power in thought o'erturns, And every bosom for the battle burns.

When genial gales the frozen air unbind,
The screaming legions wheel, and mount the wind.
Far in the sky they form their long array,
And land and ocean stretch'd immense survey
Deep deep beneath; and, triumphing in pride,
With clouds and winds commix'd, innumerous ride;
'Tis wild obstreperous clangour all, and heaven
Whirls, in tempestuous undulation driven.

Nor less th' alarm that shook the world below, Where march'd in pomp of war th' embattled foe; Where mannikins with haughty step advance, And grasp the shield, and couch the quivering lance; To right and lest the lengthening lines they form, And rank'd in deep array await the storm.

High in the midst the chieftain-dwarf was seen,
Of giant stature, and imperial mien.
Full twenty inches tall he strode along,
And view'd with lofty eye the wondering throng;
And, while with many a scar his visage frown'd,
Bared his broad bosom rough with many a wound
Of beaks and claws, disclosing to their sight
The glorious meed of high heroick might.
For with insatiate vengeance, he pursued,
And never-ending hate, the seathery brood.
Unhappy they, considing in the length
Of horny beak, or talon's crooked strength,
Who durst abide his rage; the blade descends,
And from the panting trunk the pinion rends.

The trunk disfigured stiffens in its gore.
What hosts of heroes fell beneath his force!
What heaps of chicken carnage mark'd his course!
How oft, O Strymon, thy lone banks along,
Did wailing echo wast the funeral fong!

And now from far the mingling clamours rife,
Loud and more loud rebounding through the skies.

A cloud rolls on, and darkens all the day.

Near and more near descends the dreadful shade,
And now in battailous array display'd,
On sounding wings, and screaming in their ire,
The cranes rush onward, and the fight require.

The pygmy warriors eye with fearless glare The hoft thick fwarming o'er the burthen'd air; Thick fwarming now, but to their native land Doom'd to return a feanty straggling band. -When fudden, darting down the depth of heaven. Fierce on th' expecting foe the cranes are driven. The kindling phrenfy every bosom warms, The region echoes to the crash of arms: Loofe feathers from the encountering armies fly, And in careering whirlwinds mount the fkv. To breathe from toil upfprings the panting crane, Then with fresh vigour downward darts again. Success in equal balance hovering hangs. Here, on the sharp spear, mad with mortal pangs, The bird transfix'd in bloody vortex whire, Yet fierce in death the threatening talon curls; There, while the life-blood bubbles from his wound, With little feet the pygmy beats the ground;

Deep from his breast the short short sob he draws, And dying curses the keen-pointed claws. Trembles the thundering field, thick cover'd o'er With falchions, mangled wings, and streaming gore, And pygmy arms, and beaks of ample size, And here a claw, and there a singer lies.

Encompass'd round with heaps of flaughter'd foes, All grim in blood the pygmy champion glows. And on th' affailing host impetuous springs, Careless of nibbling bills, and flapping wings; And midst the tumult wheresoe'er he turns. The battle with redoubled fury burns; From every fide th' avenging cranes amain Throng, to o'erwhelm this terror of the plain. When fuddenly (for fuch the will of Jove) A fowl enormous, fouling from above, The gallant chieftain clutch'd, and, foaring high, (Sad chance of battle!) bore him up the fky. The cranes purfue, and, clustering in a ring, Chatter triumphant round the captive king. But ah! what pangs each pygmy bofom wrung. When, now to cranes a prey, on talons hung, High in the clouds they faw their helples lord, His wriggling form still lessening as he foar'd.

Lo yet again with unabated rage
The crane with darted bill assaults the foe,
Hovering; then wheels aloft to scape the blow:
The dwarf in anguish aims the vengeful wound;
But whirls in empty air the falchion round.

Such was the scene, when midst the loud alarms
Sublime th' eternal Thunderer rose in arms.

Heaved Pelion huge, and hurl'd it high at heaven.
Jove roll'd redoubling thunders from on high,
Mountains and bolts encounter'd in the fky;
Till one stupendous ruin whelm'd the crew,
Their vast limbs weltering wide in brimstone blue.

But now at length the pygmy legions yield,
And wing'd with terror fly the fatal field.
They raife a weak and melancholy wail,
All in distraction scattering o'er the vale.
Prone on their routed rear the cranes descend;
Their bills bite furious, and their talons rend:
With unrelenting ire they urge the chace,
Sworn to exterminate the hated race.

'Twas thus the Pygmy Name, once great in war, For spoils of conquer'd cranes renown'd afar, Perish'd. For, by the dread decree of heaven, Short is the date to earthly grandeur given, And vain are all attempts to roam beyond Where Fate has fix'd the everlasting bound. Fallen are the trophics of Assyrian power, And Persia's proud dominion is no more; Yea, though to both superior far in same, Thine empire, Latium, is an empty name.

And now with lofty chiefs of antient time 'The pygmy heroes roam th' Elyfian clime. Or, if belief to matron-tales be due, Full oft, in the belated shepherd's view, Their frisking forms, in gentle green array'd, Gambol secure along the moonlight glade. Secure, for no alarming cranes molest, And all their woes in long oblivion rest,

Down the deep dale, and narrow winding way, They foot it featly, ranged in ringlets gay:
'Tis joy and frolick all, where'er they rove,
And Fairy-people is the name they love.

EPISTLE

TO THE HONOURABLE C. B.

PETERHEAD, 1766.

WHEN B invites me, and inviting fings, Instant I'd fly, (had heaven vouchsafed me wings). To hail him in that calm sequester'd seat, Whence he looks down with pity on the great; And, midst the groves retired, at leisure wooes. Domestick love, contentment, and the Muse. I wish for wings and winds to speed my course; Since B—t and the sates resuse a horse.

Where now the Pegafus of antient time, And Ippogrifo famed in modern rhime? O where that wooden steed, whose every leg Like lightning flew, obsequious to the peg; The waxen wings by Dedalus defign'd, And China waggons wafted by the wind? A Spaniard reach'd the moon, upborn by geefe; (Then first 'twas known that she is made of cheese.) A fiddler on a fifth through waves advanced, He twang'd his catgut, and the Dolphin danced. Hags rode on broom-sticks, heathen-gods on clouds: Ladies on rams and bulls have dared the floods. Much famed the shoes Jack Giantkiller wore, And Fortunatus' hat is famed much more. Such vehicles were common once, no doubt; But modern versemen must even trudge on foot, Or doze at home, expediants of the gout.

Hard is the task, indeed 'tis wondrous hard To act the Hirer *, yet preserve the Bard.

- " Next week by --- (but 'tis a fin to fwear)
- " I give my word, Sir, you shall have my mare;
- " Sound wind and limb, as any ever was,
- " And rifing only feven years old next grafs.
- " Four miles an hour the goes, nor needs a fpur;
- "A pretty piece of fleth, upon my conscience, Sir."

 This speech was B——t's; and, though mean in phrase,.
 The nearest thing to prose, as Horace says,
 (Satire the fourth, and forty second line)
 "Twill intimate that I propose to dine
 Next week with B • . Muse, lend thine aid a while;
 For this great purpose claims a losty style.

Ere yonder sun, now glorious in the west,
Has thrice three times reclined on Thetis' breast;
Ere thrice three times, from old Tithonus' bed,
Her charms all glowing with celestial red,
The balmy Morn shall rise to mortal view,
And from her bright locks shake the pearls of dew,
These eyes, O B, shall hail thy opening glades,
These ears shall catch the musick of thy shades;
This cherish'd frame shall drink the gladsome gales,
And the fresh fragrance of thy slowery vales.
And (for I know the Muse will come along)
To B I mean to meditate a fong:

^{*} One who keeps horfes to let is so called in Scot-

A fong, adorn'd with every rural charm, Trim as thy garden, ample as thy farm, Sweet as thy milk, and brisk as bottled beer, Wholesome as mutton, and as water clear, In wildshowers fertile, as thy fields of corn, And frolicksome as lambs, or sheep new shorn.

I ask not Ortolans, or Chian wine,
The fat of rams, or quintessence of swine.
Her spicy stores let either India keep,
Nor El Dorado vend her golden sheep.
And to the mansion house, or council hall,
Still on her black splay feet may the huge tortoise crawl.
Not Parson's butt my appetite can move,
Nor, Bell, thy beer; nor even thy nestar, Jove.
If B * * * be happy, and in health, his guest,
Whom wit and learning charm, can wish no better feast.

THE HARES,

A FABLE.

YES, yes, I grant the fons of earth Are doom'd to trouble from their birth. We all of forrow have our share: But fay, Is yours without compare? Look round the world; perhaps you'll find Each individual of our kind Pres'd with an equal load of ill, Equal at least. Look further still. And own your lamentable cafe Is little short of happiness. In vonder hut that stands alone Attend to Famine's feeble moan; Or view the couch where Sickness lies, Mark his pale cheek, and languid eyes, His frame by strong convulsion torn, His struggling fighs and looks forlorn. Or fee, transfix'd with keener pangs, Where o'cr his hoard the mifer hangs; Whiftles the wind; he starts, he stares, Nor Slumber's balmy bleffing shares; Despair, Remorfe, and Terror roll Their tempests on his haraff'd foul. But here perhaps it may avail T' enforce our reasoning with a tale.

Mild was the morn, the sky serene,
The jolly hunting band convene,
The beagle's breast with ardour burns,
The bounding steed the champaign spurns,
And Fancy oft the game descries
Through the hound's nose, and huntsman's eyes.

Just then, a council of the hares
Had met, on national affairs.
The chiefs were fet; while o'er their head
'The furze its frizzled covering spread.
Long lists of grievances were heard,
And general discontent appear'd.

- " Our harmless race shall every favage
- " Both quadruped and biped ravage?
- " Shall horses, hounds, and hunters still
- " Unite their wits to work us ill?
- " The youth, his parent's fole delight,
- " Whose tooth the dewy lawns invite,
- " Whose pulse in every vein beats strong,
- " Whose limbs leap light the vales along,
- " May yet ere noontide meet his death,
- " And lie dismember'd on the heath.
- " For youth, alas, nor cautious age,
- " Nor strength, nor speed, eludes their rage.
- " In every field we meet the foe,
- " Each gale comes fraught with founds of woe;
- " The morning but awakes our fears,
- " The evening fees us bath'd in tears.
- " But must we ever idly grieve,
- " Nor strive our fortunes to relieve?
- " Small is each individual's force,
- 2. To stratagem be our recourse;

- And then, from all our tribes combined.
- The murderer to his cost may find
- " No foe is weak, whom Justice arms,
- " Whom Concord leads, and Hatred warms.
- " Be roufed; or liberty acquire,
- "Or in the great attempt expire."—
 He faid no more, for in his breast
 Consticting thoughts the voice suppress'd:
 The fire of vengeance seem'd to stream
 From his swoln eyeball's yellow gleam.

And now the tumults of the war, Mingling confufedly from afar, Swell in the wind. Now louder cries Diffinct of hounds and men arise. Forth from the brake, with beating heart, Th' affembled hares tumultuous start. And, every straining nerve on wing, Away precipitately fpring. The hunting band, a fignal given, Thick thundering o'er the plain are driven; O'er cliff abrupt, and fhrubby mound, And river broad, impetuous bound : Now plunge amid the forest shades, Glance through the openings of the glades: Now o'er the level valley fweep, Now with fhort steps strain up the steep, While backward from the hunter's eyes The landscape like a torrent flies. At last an antient wood they gain'd, By pruner's ax yet unprofaned. High o'er the rest, by Nature rear'd, The oak's majestick boughs appear'd;

Beneath, a copfe of various hue In barbarous luxuriance grew. No knife had curb'd the rambling fprays, No hand had wove th' implicit maze. The flowering thorn, felf-taught to wind, The hazle's stubborn stem intwined, And bramble twigs were wreath'd around. And rough furze crept along the ground. Here sheltering, from the fons of murther, The hares drag their tired limbs no further.

But lo, the western wind erelong Was loud, and roar'd the woods among; From ruftling leaves, and crashing boughs. The found of wee and war arose. The hares diftracted fcour the grove, As terror and amazement drove; But danger, wherefoe'er they fled, Still feem'd impending o'er their head. Now crowded in a grotto's gloom, All hope extinct, they wait their doom. Dire was the filence, till, at length, Even from despair deriving strength, With bloody eye, and furious look, A daring youth arose, and spoke.

- " O wretched race, the fcorn of Fate,
- " Whom ills of every fort await!
- " O, curs'd with keenest fense to feel
- " The tharpest sting of every ill!
- " Say ye, who, fraught with mighty scheme,
- " Of liberty and vengeance dream,
- " What now remains? To what recess
- " Shall we our weary steps address,

- " Since fate is evermore pursuing
- " All ways and means to work our ruin?
- " Are we alone, of all beneath,
- " Condemn'd to mifery worfe than death!
- " Must we, with fruitless labour, strive
- " In milery worse than death to live!
- " No. Be the smaller ill our choice:
- " So dictates Nature's powerful voice.
- " Death's pang will in a moment cease;
- "And then, All hail, eternal peace!"
 Thus while he fpoke, his words impart.

The dire refolve to every heart.

A diffant lake in profpect lay, That, glittering in the folar ray,

Gleam'd through the dusky trees, and shot.

A trembling light along the grot.

Their forrows with their lives to end,

While each, in thought, already hears.

The water histing in his ears.

Fast by the margin of the lake, Conceal'd within a thorny brake, A Linnet sate, whose careless lay

Amused the solitary day.

Careless he sung, for on his breast

Sorrow no lasting trace impress'd;

When fuddenly he heard a found

Of fwift feet traverling the ground.

Quick to the neighbouring tree he flies,

Thence trembling casts around his eyes;.

No foe appear'd, his fears were vain; Pleafed he renews the sprightly strain.

The hares, whose noise had caused his fright, Saw with furprise the linnet's flight. Is there on earth a wretch, they faid, Whom our approach can strike with dread? An instantaneous change of thought To tumuit every bosom wrought. So fares the fystem-building fage, Who, plodding on from youth to age, At last on some foundation-dream Has rear'd aloft his goodly scheme, And proved his predecessors fools, And bound all nature by his rules; So fares he in that dreadful hour, When injured Truth exerts her power. Some new phenomenon to raife; Which, burfting on his frighted gaze, Frem its proud fummit to the ground Proves the whole edifice unfound.

" Children," thus fpoke a hare fedate, Who oft had known th' extremes of fate.

- " In flight events the attentive mind " May hints of good instruction find.
- " That our condition is the worft,
- " And we with fuch misfortunes curs'd
- " As all comparison defy,
- " Was late the univerfal cry.
- " When lo, an accident fo flight
- " As yonder little linnet's flight
- " Has made your stubborn heart confess
- " (So your amazement bids me guess)
- " That all our load of woes and fears
- " Is but a part of what he bears.

- Where can he rest secure from harms,
- Whom even a helpless hare alarms?
- Yet he repines not at his lot,
- " When past his dangers are forgot:
- " On yonder bough he trims his wings,
- " And with unufual rapture fings;
- While we, less wretched, fink beneath
- " Our lighter ills, and rush to death .-
- " No more of this unmeaning rage,
- " But bear, my friends, the words of age.
 "When by the winds of autumn driven
- " The fcatter'd clouds fly crofs the heaven,
- " Oft have we, from some mountain's head,
- " Beheld th' alternate light and shade
- " Sweep the long vale. Here hovering lowers
- " The shadowy cloud; there downward pours,
- 44 Streaming direct, a flood of day,
- Which from the view flies swift away;
- " It flies, while other shades advance,
- " And other streaks of funshine glance.
- " Thus chequer'd is the life below
- " With gleams of joy, and clouds of woe.
- "Then hope not, while we journey on,
- " Still to be balking in the fun;
- " Nor fear, though now in shades ye mourn,
- "That funshine will no more return.
- " If, by your terrors overcome,
- "Ye fly before th' approaching gloom,
- " The rapid clouds your flight purfue,
- 44 And darkness still o'ercasts your view.
- " Who longs to reach the radiant plain
- Must onward urge his course amain;

- " For doubly fwift the shadow flies,
- " When 'gainst the gale the pilgrim plies.
- " At least be firm, and undifmay'd
- " Maintain your ground; the fleeting shade
- " Erelong spontaneous glides away,
- " And gives you back th' enlivening ray.
- " Lo, while I speak, our danger past!
- " No more the shrill horn's angry blast
- " Howls in our ear; the favage roar
- " Of war and murder is no more.
- " Then fnatch the hour that fate allows,
- "Nor think of past or future woes."
 He spoke; and hope revives; the lake.
 That instant one and all forsake,
 In sweet amusement to employ

The present sprightly hour of joy.

Now from the western mountain's brow, Compass'd with clouds of various glow, The sun a broader orb displays, And shoots aslope his ruddy rays. The lawn assumes a fresher green, And dew-drops spangle all the scene. The balmy zephyr breathes along, The shepherd sings his tender song, With all their lays the groves resound, And salling waters murmur round; Discord and Care were put to sight, And all was peace, and calm delight.

EPITAPH:

Being part of an Inscription for a monument to be erected by a gentleman to the memory of his lady.

FAREWELL, my best-beloved; whose heavenly mind Genius with virtue, strength with softness join'd; Devotion, undebased by pride or art, With meek simplicity, and joy of heart; Though sprightly, gentle; though polite, sincere; And only of thyself a judge severe; Unblamed, unequal'd, in each sphere of life, The tenderest Daughter, Sister, Parent, Wise. In thee their Patroness th' afflicted lost; Thy friends, their pattern, ornament, and boast; And I—but ah, can words my loss declare, Or paint th' extremes of transport and despair! O Thou, beyond what verse or speech can tell, My guide, my friend, my best-beloved, farewell!

ON

LORD HAY'S BIRTH DAY

13th May 1767.

A Muse, unskill'd in venal praise,
Unstain'd with flattery's art;
Who loves simplicity of lays
Breathed ardent from the heart;
While gratitude and joy inspire,
Resumes the long-unpractifed lyre,
To hail, O Hay, thy Natal Morn:
No gaudy wreathe of flowers she weaves,
But twines with oak the laurel leaves,
Thy cradle to adorn.

For not on beds of gaudy flowers
Thine ancestors reclined,
Where Sloth dissolves, and Spleen devours
All energy of mind.
To hurl the dart, to ride the car,
To stem the deluges of war,
And snatch from fate a sinking land;
Trample th' Invader's losty crest,
And from his grasp the dagger wrest,
And desolating brand:

Twas this, that raised th' illustrious Line
To match the first in fame;
A thousand years have seen it shine
With unabated stame:
Have seen thy mighty Sires appear
Foremost in Glory's high career,
The pride and pattern of the Brave.
Yet, pure from lust of blood their fire,
And from Ambition's wild desire,
They triumph'd but to save.

The Muse with joy attends their way.
The vales of peace along;
There to its Lord the village gay.
Renews the grateful song.
You castle's glittering towers contain.
No pit of woe, nor clanking chain,
Nor to the suppliant's wail resound:
The open doors the needy bless,
Th' unfriended hail their calm recess,
And gladness smiles around.

There to the sympathetick heart Life's best delights belong,
'To mitigate the mourner's smart,
To guard the weak from wrong.
Ye Sons of Luxury, be wise;
Know, happiness for ever sites
The cold and solitary breast;
Then let the social instinct glow,
And learn to seel another's woe,
And in his joy be bless'd.

O yet, ere Pleasure plant her snare
For unsuspecting youth;
Ere Flattery her song prepare
To check the voice of Truth;
O may his country's Guardian power
Attend the slumbering Infant's bower,
And bright, inspiring dreams impart;
To rouse th' hereditary fire,
To kindle each sublime desire,
Exalt, and warm the heart.

Swift to reward a Parent's fears,

A Parent's hopes to crown,
Roll on in peace, ye blooming years,
That rear him to renown;
When in his finish'd form and face
Admiring multitudes shall trace
Each patrimonial charm combined,
The courteous yet majestick mien,
The liberal smile, the look serene,
The great and gentle mind.

Yet, though thou draw a nation's eyes, And win a nation's love,
Let not thy towering mind despise
The village and the grove.
No slander there shall wound thy same,
No russian take his deadly aim,
No rival weave the secret snare:
For Innocence with angel smile,
Simplicity that knows not guile,
And Love and Peace are there.

When winds the mountain oak affail,
And lay its glories waste,
Content may slumber in the vale,
Unconscious of the blast.
Through scenes of tumult while we roam,
The heart, alas! is ne'er at home,
It hopes in time to roam no more;
The mariner, not vainly brave,
Combats the storm, and rides the wave,
To rest at last on shore.

Ye proud, ye felfish, ye severe,
How vain your mask of state!
The good alone have joy sincere,
The good alone are great:
Great, when, amid the vale of peace,
They bid the plaint of sorrow cease,
And hear the voice of artless praise;
As when along the trophy'd plain
Sublime they lead the victor train,
While shouting nations gaze.

THE HERMIT.

A T the close of the day, when the hamlet is still,
And mortals the sweets of forgetfulness prove,
When nought but the torrent is heard on the hill,
And nought but the nightingale's fong in the grove:
Twas then, by the cave of the mountain afar,
A Hermit his song of the night thus began;
No more with himself or with nature at war,
He thought as a Sage, while he felt as a Man.

- " Ah, why thus abandon'd to darkness and woe,
- " Why thus, lonely Philomel, flows thy fad strain?
- " For Spring shall return, and a lover bestow,
- " And thy bosom no trace of misfortune retain.
- "Yet, if pity inspire thee, ah cease not thy lay,
- " Mourn, sweetest Complainer, Man calls thee to mourn :
- " O foothe him, whose pleasures like thine pass away-
- f' Full quickly they pass, but they never return.
- " Now gliding remote, on the verge of the fky,
- 56 The Moon half extinguish'd her crescent displays:
- " But lately I mark'd, when majestick on high
- 56 She shone, and the planets were lost in her blaze.
- " Roll on, thou fair orb, and with gladness pursue
- " The path that conducts thee to splendor again.
- 56 But Man's faded glory no change shall renew,
- # Ah fool! to exult in a glory fo vain!

- "Tis night, and the landscape is lovely no more;
- " I mourn, but, ye woodlands, I mourn not for you:
- " For morn is approaching, your charms to restore,
- " Perfumed with fresh fragrance, and glittering with dew.
- " Nor yet for the ravage of winter I mourn;
- " Kind Nature the embryo bloffom will fave .-
- " But when shall Spring visit the mouldering urn!
- " O when shall it dawn on the night of the grave!"
- "Twas thus, by the glare of false Science betray'd,
- ' That leads, to bewilder; and dazzles, to blind;
- ' My thoughts wont to roam, from shade onward to
- Destruction before me, and forrow behind.
- " O pity, great Father of light," then I cry'd,
- " Thy creature who fain would not wander from Thee!
- " Lo, humbled in dust, I relinquish my pride:
- " From doubt and from darkness thou only canst free."
- And darkness and doubt are now flying away.
- ! No longer I roam in conjecture forlorn.
- ' So breaks on the traveller, faint, and aftray,
- 'The bright and the balmy effulgence of morn.
- See Truth, Love, and Mercy, in triumph descending,
- ' And Nature all glowing in Eden's first bloom!
- On the cold cheek of Death fmiles and rofes are blending,

And Beauty Immortal awakes from the tomb.'
